The New York Mhney market may be subject to momentary fits and starts, occasioned by transient panies, which may came the price of money to advance for a time, but until there are more borrowers in the market than at present, there can hardly be any permanent and material rise in rates.

Foreign Exchange cheed easier yesterday than it did the week previous. We quote hankers' sterling bills 100 hea h for sixty days, and 110 years, for short sight, frances, 125 for sixty days, and 100 years, for short sight.
